ICOMOS Heritage Alerts draw on the knowledge of the ICOMOS professional network, as well as the information supplied by third parties, such as civil society organisations, to investigate requests for international action where potentially significant heritage places are threatened, in order to achieve a rigorous, independent assessment of the situation.
ICOMOS and ICOMOS Austria wrote to the Mayor of Vienna in December 2015 to express their deep concern for the situation of the Otto-Wagner-Hospital, owned by the City of Vienna. Opened in 1907 as a sanatorium and psychiatric hospital, it is still partly used as a hospital.

The significance of the site as an extensive Art Nouveau ensemble, built by Otto Wagner with the participation of Heinrich Goldemund, has been confirmed by several scientific studies. The importance refers to both the architectural characteristics and the spatial planning of the site, including the horticultural design of the gardens. In addition, its relevance to developments in the history of medicine and therapy is of major cultural value. Whilst the core area (Kernbereich, pavilions and church) of the site benefits of Statutory Monument Protection, no protection is afforded to the economic area (Wirtschaftsbereich) in the eastern part. Today the site is gravely endangered by recent and ongoing constructions; change in the land use of the “Wirtschaftsbereich”; the planned closing of hospital services within the next decade; and the increasingly poor state of conservation of a number of the historic structures.

In its letter, ICOMOS calls upon the authorities of Vienna and Austria not to allow economic aspects to override the cultural importance of the ensemble and to urgently extend the status of protection to include the “Wirtschaftsbereich”; to reconsider the development and conservation concept for the entire area; and to develop a usage programme for the future when the hospital services close, which will consider the exceptional importance and history of the whole ensemble. The Vice Mayor of Vienna replied to ICOMOS on 20 January 2016 providing a number of assurances related to the “core area” of the site. For this reason, ICOMOS replied on 16 March 2016 that its concerns for the site remain until the whole ensemble – including the “economic area” – receives full protection, based on a holistic approach. No new construction should take place until appropriate discussions based on ongoing studies have occurred.

In July 2015, ICOMOS wrote to the French Minister of Culture, concerning the fate of the building housing the Banque Populaire de l’Ouest (BPO) in Montgemont, near Rennes. This iconic piece of contemporary architecture dating from 1990, with its innovative approach of mixing architecture, engineering and industry in search of a new spatiality, was threatened by a demolition permit. The petition to save it included the signatures of Daniel Buren, Frank Gehry, Norman Foster and Jean Nouvel, among others.

Conceived by French architects Odile Decq and Benoit Cornette and the American engineer Peter Rice, the building received 12 national and international prizes including the Benedictus Award in 1994 and the Golden Lion at the Venice Biennale in 1996, and has been widely published and researched. It features in the permanent exhibition of the Cité de l’architecture et du patrimoine in Paris. Technically exceptional with its architectural experimentations, such as its suspended double glazing facades, the BPO building embodies the “high tech” movement at the same level as the HSBC Tower in Hong Kong or the Lloyds Headquarters in London.

ICOMOS advocated withdrawing the demolition permit and exploring the building’s reuse by increasing the buildable area of the 7 hectare site, and put its expert advice at the disposal of the Ministry. The international and national efforts had a positive outcome. The demolition permit has since been withdrawn, and it was announced 19 May 2016 that the BPO building will welcome the Training Centre for Construction Apprentices in Brittany in September 2019.
